

Between 1975 and 1995, the world of action figures was virtually taken over by figures in 1:18 scale, or 3.75". Hundreds of figures were produced for dozens of toy lines, anchored by the blockbuster success of Kenner's Star Wars and Hasbro's G.I. Joe franchises. These smaller figures still regularly compete with their larger brothers and sisters for space in toy aisles throughout the world today.

Features

- Over 2,000 figures, modern and vintage, listed with their accessories
- Brief overview of related toys: trading cards, books, and records
- Fully indexed, with information on actors and media that inspired the toys

Take a dive into nostalgia, with action figures perfectly designed for your pocket or pencil case, ready to slip out the door into another backyard or schoolyard adventure!

About the Author

Jeff Wyonch is a Web programming and design professional based in Toronto. He's been an avid reader of sci-fi, fantasy, and comics, and a collector his entire life.

Jeff's first 1:18 scale toy was the Fisher Price Adventure People Sea Explorer playset, which soon became a stand-in for the Millennium Falcon.

Beater, Loose, Incomplete

Jeff Wyonch

Beater, Loose, Incomplete

A Partial Checklist for 1:18 Scale Vintage and Modern Action Figures

Jeff Wyonch

